The last week of Nocturne @ Holland Festival

photo: Joris Jan Bos

On the 2nd of June, the Atrium of the Muziekgebouw aan 't IJ was packed with audience for the opening of Nocturne - created with two pianos 'died' in the tsunami that struck the Northeastern region of Japan in 2011. The installation is daily opened until 29th of June during Holland Festival.

Donate a piano to the children of Japan

On the 11th of March 2011 a lot of Japanese children were robbed by the tsunami of the chance to experience the big enjoyment, pleasure and also comfort of playing music. All their instruments were destroyed by the earthquake and incredible power of the waves that followed. During the installation Nocturne in Amsterdam, we present a small campaign to get people to donate money towards a fund out of which new/old pianos can be bought for the children in the North of Japan. You too can still help 'to give music back to the children'; look here if you like to learn more about this Japanese organization.

My Own Private Odyssey with Club Guy & Roni 2014 - 2015

Next season will start with a new and exciting collaboration. I will be creating a new production with Club Guy and Roni, My Private Odyssey. This new creation based on Homer's Odyssey is a metaphore for the path of life that everyone has to go through in which creativity and courage are challenged.

I hope to see you all again at one of my productions the coming season and for now wish you a very happy and sunny summer!
