Feeling festive this year has been complicated for me. However, I am now starting to embrace the season. I am convinced that my friends, my family, and the community I belong to will prove that we must be festive this year. The reason is to contribute to a healing society, to do justice to the love we have within us, and that we are ready to give to others.

Listen carefully. Perhaps, very gently, you can notice the sounds of me rehearsing for December 5th. I am preparing Nikolai Korndorf's meditative composition 'Yarilo' and I realize that this piece brings forth the beauty we truly deserve. In the middle of undeniably upsetting times and vile media reports, I'm trying to stay focussed in my preparations to be with you on the coming Tuesday evening. It has never felt more evident to organize a December 5th concert, continuing our annual tradition, this year at the beautiful sacred space of De Duij.

I have one specific wish for everyone joining us: let's consider De Duij as our shared house that evening. For me, my house is where I welcome both friends and strangers; it's also where I seek solace in tranquility, getting lost in my own thoughts. It's a space that should feel closest to us, embodying the most sincere form of spatiality.

If you are still looking for plans for Tuesday evening, December 5th, I invite you to join us at our temporary house for a musical tradition at 8:00 p.m. Hope to see you there.
